Independent Film & Television Alliance®

REPRESENTING PRODUCERS AND DISTRIBUTORS WORLDWIDE

Welcome to AFM LA|26.

The American Film Market is the annual gathering of the global independent sector. For 47 years, it has been where deals get done and relationships get built. Buyers and sellers from around the world meet here to finance, license and launch the films and shows audiences go on to love. Some of you have walked the AFM halls for decades. Some of you are here for the first time. And it's all of you who make this Market what it is.

I'm Jackie Brenneman, and this is my first AFM as President and CEO of the Independent Film & Television Alliance. I'm honored to step into an organization and event with this much history at such an important time filled with innovation and change.

Here's what isn't changing: AFM is still the place where relationships turn into deals. It's still the one week each year when the people who make, sell, buy and show independent films all gather in Los Angeles to get business done. And it's still built on a simple belief: independent filmmakers deserve a strong and sustainable business to support their work.

What's changing is how we get there. Consolidation continues to impact the major studio system while at the same time filmmakers have closer relationships with their audiences than ever, the cost of reaching a screen keeps falling, and AI and technology are everywhere. This leads to unprecedented opportunity for the independent sector, which is built to adapt.

If the model is changing, the market has to change with it. As the organization behind AFM, IFTA's job is to protect every part of this business.

Our first-ever New Global Screen Economy Summit brings together the people building the next generation of storytelling models, from audience data to new release strategies. Our new AFM House at The Pavilion will host Cinemas Club, with Cine Group and the Marché du Film's Cannes Next, alongside an Innovation Hub showing new tools to improve the way we make, market and distribute movies. And, for the first time, we've invited avid moviegoers to select AFM screenings through our partnership with AMC A-List and the fan-driven B-List Movie Club.

The people writing the new rules are here this week. We can open the doors. It's up to you to take your seat at the table.

IFTA®

Independent Film & Television Alliance®

The Global Trade Association of the Independent Motion Picture
& Television Industry

IFTA® Overview

The Independent Film & Television Alliance® (IFTA) represents the independent film and television sector around the world. Our Member companies, based in more than 20 countries, are the world's foremost independent production and distribution companies, financiers, and sales agents.

Headquartered in Los Angeles, IFTA is the only organization that unites the collective voice of Independents worldwide and ensures that they are well represented across all issues that impact the independent business. The Independents are those companies that create films and TV programming outside the vertically integrated studios and global distribution networks.

IFTA Members are primarily owner-driven entrepreneurial companies that take on the individualized risk of every project, seek financing through equity investors and advance distribution commitments, and release the film or program by licensing to local theatrical, television, and online distributors around the world. This is a vastly different model than that of the major studios, broadcasters, and online platforms who reach audiences through their own affiliates. It is the prevalent model around the world and Independents generate more than 70% of the films produced in the U.S.

IFTA Members have produced, distributed, and financed many of the world's most prominent films, including 27 of the last 43 Academy Award® winners for Best Picture, most recently Anora, Everything Everywhere All at Once, CODA, and Parasite. Collectively, IFTA Members produce more than 500 independent films and countless hours of television programming each year which generate nearly $3.3 billion in sales revenue annually while creating hundreds of thousands of jobs and millions of dollars in economic impact.

IFTA was formed more than 40 years ago and remains dedicated to protecting and strengthening the Independents' ability to compete effectively in an ever-changing and challenging global marketplace. IFTA lobbies governments and regulatory bodies to strengthen and enforce protections against digital piracy, to eliminate trade barriers in markets such as China, to promote open competition, and to ensure that regulatory measures affecting the entertainment industry recognize the economic differences between the needs of the major entertainment companies and of the Independents.

Among its many other services to the industry, IFTA develops the IFTA® Model Agreements which set the standards and definitions for licensing international rights in motion pictures and television programming. A comprehensive review and update of the MILA to address AI is currently underway. The association also provides ongoing business information and guidance through webinars and publications and has distributed more than $175 million in royalties and levies from secondary audiovisual rights through IFTA Collections™.

Each November, IFTA produces the annual American Film Market®, the world's largest motion picture business event, drawing thousands of industry leaders from more than 80 countries for 6 days of deal making, screenings, conferences and networking between sellers, buyers, producers, and other industry stakeholders. The business done each year at AFM leads to millions of dollars in distribution and film financing deals.
